Graduated Taxation and Clause Affecting Insurance Companies Are Opposed.

WASHINGTON, May 28 -- Reports that the income tax provision of the Underground of unconstitutionality have reached the ears of the members of the Ways and Means Committee. They assert positively that the bill will stand to the size of the income. The second is to be directed against the provision taxing dividends of insurance companies. hole in these provisions assert that it can be done in spite of the adoption of the new clause in the Constitution spe cifically authorizing a levy of tax on in-

"The two chief features of the bill which have been under fire," said Representative Hull, the author of the income tax provision, "are the clauses fixing the graduated tax or surtax upon incomes according to their size, and the provision for the taxation of dividends of insurance companies.

"Both are beyond criticism of any fate minded person and also beyond the reach of persons who would attack their constitutionality in the Federal courts. The graduated system of taxation has been approved by the Federal judiciary. The New Jersey District Court and the Court of Appeals for that circuit have sustained the validity of such graduated

"The New Jersey case tested the graduated tax system as applied to inheritance taxes, squarely in point with the similar system in the income tax. The Federal courts declared in the inheritance tax cases that it was folly to assert that the Government could not put into operation the most equitable tax system known, that of taxing highest the persons who are best able to meet the tax. This is exactly what the income tax will do. It will reach the wealthy men, who are best able to bear the heavier burden of taxatton. It will also reach a lot of men who have never contributed their just share to the expense of maintaining the Government. Representative Hull was in consultation to-day with the Senate sub-com-mittee that has the income tax provision under consideration. He plained in detail the purposes of the various sections of the income tax provisions and suggested a number changes of a minor nature, relating largely to phraseology. So far as' can be learned there is no present intention on the part of the sub-committee to recommend amendments to this fea. ture of the Underwood bill.
